

I Am Not A Writer

I am not a writer.
A writer moves their pen fluently across the page,
born with the nature of picking up the quill.
I've only developed myself to this level
where my pen still travels a bumpy road.

I am not a writer.
Writers create magic with the turns of their wrist
that translate the ideas of their mind.
I fail to translate my penmanship for the connection to my brain entangles within my blood.

I am not a writer.
Writers bring ink to life
in the eyes of the open.
Yet my images merely die
along with my farfetched dreams.

I am not a writer,
for a writer lives as a king.
The words they use their peasants and the pen their ring.
My army has lost the war and remains to lie.
I only stand. This General hand fails in every way.

So I am not a writer.
I do not give birth to what I believe,
but call me a man of pride.
Although I cannot write artwork
I can still always try.